For many religions, Mount Kailash (6638 m) is the most important one. Seeing Mt. Kailash up close is a dream, and circumventing it is a once-in-a-lifetime event. So, get ready for the challenge and have the pilgrimage tour of your life.

After spending a day in Kathmandu, also the home to Pashupatinath, one of the most important Shiva temples in the world, we will reach the Chinese border to the north of Nepal the next day. Tibet Kailash Tour is made on a vehicle to Kailash Base Camp, after which we will spend three-day on trekking around Mount Kailash. Mount Kailash is also religiously significant to Hindus, Buddhists, and Jain and Bon followers. En route to Kailash, you pass through the barren hills, yak meadows, patchy green fields, dunes, waterfalls, and rivers that make up the breathtaking landscape of Tibet. You also visit the serene Mansarovar Lake and offer prayers by doing puja on the river bank. This Tibet Kailash tour will purify your soul as you lose yourself in the mystic land of the Roof of the World. It is best to do this dour from March to May and from September to November.
